THE TENNIS SWEATER

This style was invented in the US and worn by tennis champions like Malcolm D Whitman as early as 1902. It was most famously worn by the Prince of Wales throughout the '20s. The V-neck style became popular in the UK and the US during the mid '30s. Today, we wear it casually with designer track pants.

THE TRACK JACKET

Like so many things in menswear, the track jacket also finds its origins in the world of sporting. The style was invented in the '50s, worn primarily by athletes, but then brought to market by adidas in 1968. The full track suit became a popular staple in the '70s, mostly thanks to pop culture phenomena like Bruce Lee. It then became a symbol of hip-hop culture in the '80s. Track jackets today come in a variety of exciting new print and textile variations. We like ours oversized, worn with a printed tee over jeans, shorts or even suit pants.
